ACTRESS. MODEL

Iman Benson is a talented young actress that won the hearts of audiences, as Tia, the cute quirky daughter, on the ABC comedy "Uncle Buck." An entertainer that takes her craft very seriously, Iman has studied extensively in her home state of Atlanta, GA, working with celebrated theater companies, and acting coaches, while honing her stage, television/film, and voice-over acting skills.

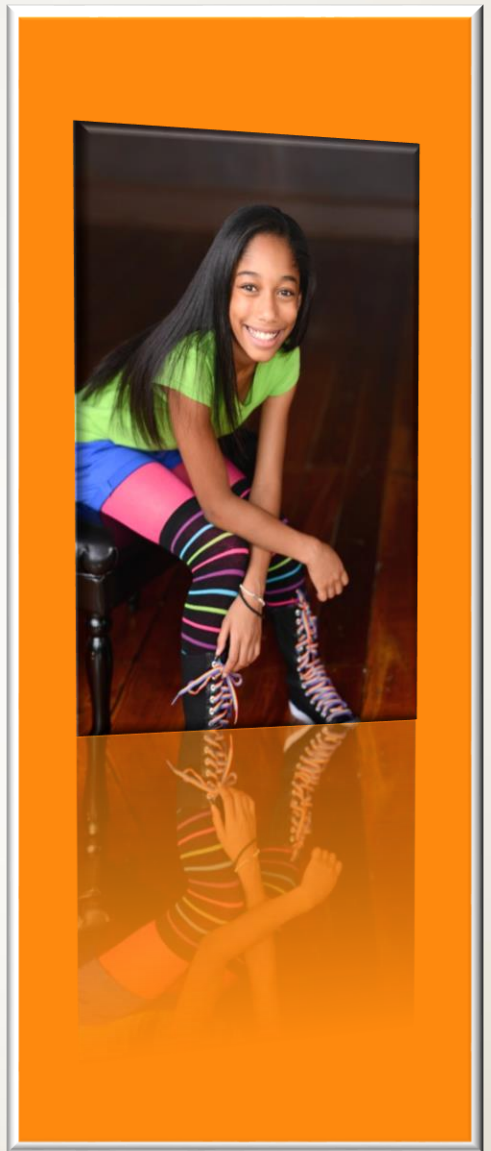

An adamant professional, Iman strives to establish herself as a rising star in Hollywood, with a strong moral character and impeccable work ethic. Her goal is to build a career that has longevity and sustainability like her mentor and co-star, Nia Long, who plays her mother on "Uncle Buck."

Born in Atlanta, GA, Iman is in high school, and excels in the Scholastic Gifted Program and is also a member of The Future Business Leaders of America and Performing Arts Club. In addition to training with acting coaches, she has also appeared in numerous stage productions. The goal driven young actress has a desire to one day be the youngest actress to win a SAG (Screen Actors Guild) Award.

"It is one of my goals to one day be the youngest person to ever win a Screen Actors Guild Award (SAG)."

Along with her love for acting, she also has a passion for connecting with other young people and uplifting them, so they too can strive to achieve their goals and not settle for less. She recently became an ambassador with the organizations, Saving Our Daughters/Saving Our Cinderella's. This enables her to meet with and encourage girls her age to have strong self esteem, and to follow their dreams. It is also an organization that combats bullying, and violence against women/girls. She hopes to do more with the organizations to truly have an impact on raising the self-image of girls and bringing awareness to those that feel they don't have a voice. With this in mind Iman recently taped a PSA, encouraging young people to "Take the Power Away from Bullies," by standing united together against the perpetrators and having no tolerance for bullying.

A powerhouse on stage and in-front of the camera, Iman Benson is preparing to make an impact in Hollywood; and join the ranks of the new breed of talented young thespians shining in Tinsel Town.

When Iman is not working , she enjoys, shopping, watching movies, reading and spending time with family and friends.
